k Another approach is to use the StringBuilder class, which offers methods like append, appendFormat, appendLine and so on. However, you have to append the output to another instance of the StringBuilder. `public void print(double x){ StringBuilder sb = new StringBuilder(); sb.append(x); sb.append(System.getProperty("line.separator")); System.out.println(sb.toString()); }` to get the ball rolling. But it is the farm system that makes them the leaders. A farm system that has been stagnating for years, but, there is a process in place to have it become a player development powerhouse in a few short years. Also: "If you want to look at where the real problem is in all of this, it's not the $3 billion figure or anything like that. It's the farm system. That's where the real problem is." Farm system, huh? Can they not just have a goddamn single player deal since the Padres have better farm system talent than anyone else? Jayson Stark is just a biased idiot who is making a living pretending to be a reporter. Why are fans bothering with him? ----- encoderer I'm far more concerned about Bud Selig's legacy. I'm not sure he's been succeeding. jey That _is_ some amazing content. I wouldn't have expected to see that sort of information from the front page of one of the top sites in my field. I wonder if this is typical of the writing style at Fox Sports. baddox This article gives a good sense of how accurate MLB's numbers really are. Averaging close to $20 million a year does not make one a "power hitter", though it does make one a "big spender." jabr The fact that he bought a ring for $10M is like a badge of honor. snitko I always thought that if he was so wealthy he should give away some of it to help the US economy. Maybe he could start by buying Microsoft shares.. ceph_ That was one hell of an article, now if only he would 82157476af
